Insurance Agreement:

Please remember that insurance is considered a method of reimbursing the client for fees paid to the provider and is not a substitute for payment. Some companies pay fixed allowances for certain procedures and others pay a percentage of the charge. It is your responsibility to pay the deductible amount, co-insurance or any other balance not paid by your insurance. You will be responsible to pay full charge for missed appointments not cancelled 24 hours in advance. Patient's or authorized person's signature: I authorize the release of my medical or other information necessary to process this claim. I also request payment of government benefits, Medicare, private insurance and other health plans to the party who accepts assignment below.

If this account is assigned to an attorney for collection and/or suit, the prevailing party shall be entitled to a reasonable attorney's fees and cost of collections.

To the extent necessary to determine liability for payment and to obtain reimbursement, I authorize disclosure of my records.

I hereby assign all medical benefits to include major medical benefits to which I am entitled, including; private insurance and other health plans to Matthew Peters Sieradski, MAcOM, LAc.

This assignment will remain in effect until revoked by me, in writing. A photocopy of this assignment is to be considered as valid as the original. I understand that I am financially responsible for all charges whether or not paid by said insurance. I hereby authorize said assignee to release all information necessary to secure payment.

PRIVACY POLICY:

All information divulged on the intake questionnaire or during the course of your treatments is privileged and kept strictly confidential in accordance with the Board of Medical Examiners and HIPAA guidelines. By signing below, I indicate that I have also read the Notice of Privacy Policy as provided by the office of Matthew Peters Sieradski, L.Ac.

DESCRIPTION OF THERAPEUTIC MODALITIES:

Acupuncture entails the insertion of needles that are sterile, single-use, very fine, and solid (unlike a syringe) into specific locations (acupoints) along the body to a depth that averages around ⅛ to ¼ inch, but varies from very superficial (less than 1 mm) to deeper (1 or more inches). Acupuncture sometimes entails a momentary pricking sensation, which ceases once the skin has been breached. After insertion, a dull, achy sensation is often elicited through manipulation of the needle – this indicates the activation of the patient's qi. Occassionally, electro-acupuncture will also be employed, usually in the case of stubborn pain conditions. This entails the use of small voltage current between two or more needles, most commonly producing a small buzzing or tickling sensation.

Often acupuncture is combined with heat therapy, most commonly the use of an infrared emitting lamp that deeply penetrates the body's tissues to promote circulation and healing. Also, moxibustion, the burning of small amounts of the herb mugwort, (artemisia vulgaris) on or near the skin may be recommended.

Cupping is the placing of glass suction cups on the skin, and is used to draw out toxins from the deeper tissues into the bloodstream where they can be properly eliminated. It effectively and efficiently increases qi and blood circulation locally and can result in reddening or bruising of the skin.

Chinese Massage, or tuina, is similar to Western therapeutic massage but emphasizes balancing the circulation of qi and utilizes unique techniques and tools. It is employed for specific conditions of musculoskeletal imbalance as a complement to acupuncture.

Craniosacral Therapy is a healthcare modality in line with Chinese traditional models of health and healing that uses very light touch to resolve subtle imbalances in the skeletal, visceral, and neurological tissue. It provides powerful relief to difficult health conditions and promotes balance of mind, body and emotions.

Herbal Medicine employs specially formulated decoctions (teas), powders, and pills – composed of plant, mineral, and animal substances. Herbal decoctions are usually the strongest smelling and/or tasting, and are the most effective form of administration. Powders and pills are simpler to prepare and often useful for chronic ailments that require long-term therapy. A branch of herbal medicine treats external problems such as injuries and skin ailments using pastes, plasters, and liniments. I have over 220 bulk herbs in my pharmacy.

Diet Therapy involves restrictions and additions to the patient's daily food intake. Chinese diet therapy employs an understanding of how various types of foods are helpful or harmful for different constitutions and health conditions.

INFORMED CONSENT TO TREATMENT:

I understand that any of the above therapeutic modalities may be recommended to me by Matthew Peters Sieradski, a Licensed Acupuncturist in the state of Oregon. Furthermore, by signing below, I voluntarily consent to be treated by Mr. Sieradski by one or more of the above therapies, as they fall under the scope of his licensure. I also understand that acupuncture and the above modalities of health care are generally safe, but do carry a small risk of side effects including, but not limited to, bruising, numbness or tingling near the needling sites that may last a few days, and dizziness or fainting. Bruising is a common side effect of cupping. Burns are a possible side effect of moxibustion. Some possible side effects of taking herbs are nausea, gas, stomachache, vomiting, headache, diarrhea, rashes, hives, and tingling of the tongue. I understand that other side effects may occur. I will notify Matthew Peters Sieradski if I am or become pregnant or if I have any questions or concerns regarding any of these treatments at any time.

By voluntarily signing below, I show that I have read, or have had read to me, the above consent to treatment and description of therapeutic modalities, have been told about the risks and benefits of acupuncture and the other procedures, and have had an opportunity to ask questions. I have also read the Notice of Privacy Practices and understand a copy is available upon request. I intend this consent form to cover the entire course of treatment for my present condition and for any future condition(s) for which I seek treatment.
